In terms of time commitment, the involvement may be limited to simply contacting a willing contractor or architect who would work with the owner and the structural engineer without much further involvement from our office. Alternately it could involve lots of time on the phone and multiple trips to the property.

Stewart, I agree that the slave cabin is an important historic item. There are three issues. As you know, your responsibility is design review, not projects. Second, your involvement might link the HLC in some way with the project. I would like to bring this before the HLC Monday night and have the Commission agree to your participation. Thirdly, how much work time would this project take?
