I. Abstract

Statement of Significance

The Marion R. and Lavonne Marsh House, located in the Myers Park National Register Historic District, is a locally significant historic resource to Mecklenburg County as the home of one of the most influential and successful architects in Charlotte and the greater North Carolina piedmont, Marion R. Marsh (October 21, 1893-September 4, 1977). Marsh lived here during the most prolific time in his career until his death. After acquiring a desirable lot in Myers Park, Marsh designed his home in the popular Colonial Revival style. Active from 1922 to 1964, during a major boom in Charlotte's development, Marsh designed numerous high-style buildings, from revival-style residences to modern office buildings while residing in this home. Several of his buildings are designated on the national and local level for their architectural significance. On the National Register of Historic Places, a Tudor Revival residence in Charlotte designed by Marsh for Fritz Seifart (1938), was listed in 2006 and the Gem Theater (1936) in Kannapolis, North Carolina, designed by Marsh, was listed in 2019. On the local level, Builders Building (1926), Carolina Cadillac Company (1926), Coca-Cola Bottling Plant (1929), and Eastover Elementary School (1935), described in the Associative History section, are all Marsh-designed local designated landmarks in Mecklenburg County. The Marion R. and Lavonne Marsh House is an excellent surviving example of Marsh's residential work in Charlotte and retains a high level of integrity.

Archaeological Comments

No known archaeological features are present at this time.

Integrity Statement

- Location: The Marion R. and Lavonne Marsh House remains in its original location (High).
- Design: The house retains its original form and design features and is an excellent example of Marsh's residential design work. The Marsh-designed 1947 addition above the screened-in porch on the south side of the façade did not materially alter such original design elements as the house's form, space, structure, massing, proportion, and scale, and has acquired its own architectural significance and historic association with the house and its inhabitants in the subsequent 70+ years. In 2021 a second-floor addition was made to the garage on the north side of the façade and retained as many design features and historic materials as possible (Appendix 1) (Medium).
- Setting: The home stands among other historically significant early-20th century residences in the Myers Park National Register Historic District. It is located on an elongated corner lot with mature trees and plantings. A running bond brick walkway leads to the front door (High).
- Workmanship: The workmanship put into the handsome exterior and interior features of the residence is of the highest quality. From the details in the woodwork to the delicate brick pointing, craftsmen of the highest level of skill have made their mark on this home over the decades (High).
- Materials: As a testament to the excellent workmanship and design of the home, many historic or historically appropriate materials remain. Over the years, the family has taken great care to retain a high level of integrity in materials and techniques used, including their 2021 addition, which retained the gable and gable window of the original garage (High).
- Feeling: Despite the 2021 addition, the feeling of the home remains as intended (High).

- Association: The home is associated with architect Marion R. Marsh as his place of residence during the most prolific time in his career. Designed and seamlessly expanded twenty years later by Marsh, the house is an excellent example of his residential architecture (High).

Proposed Boundary Justification

The proposed boundary for local landmark designation is the building's .376 acre parcel.

Interior Designation Parameters

III. Associative History

Marion R. Marsh, Architect and Engineer

Marion Rossiter “Steve” Marsh (1893-1977) is renowned as one of the most influential and successful architects in Charlotte and the greater North Carolina piedmont.¹ Marsh was born in Duval County, Jacksonville Florida to William W. and Barbara F. Marsh on October 21, 1893. His father, born in Georgia, was a furniture merchant and his older brother Mulford was an architect. By 16 years old, Marion was working as a draftsman apprentice at his brother’s architectural firm, Marsh and Saxlebye, in Jacksonville and taking correspondence courses from Columbia University. Notably, Marsh and his brother designed numerous army camps for the government during World War I.

In 1916, Marsh came to Charlotte to become chief draftsman for the architectural firm of James M. McMichael and, later, the chief architect of the chemical engineering firm of Peter Gilchrist.² McMichael, an architect based in Charlotte, was one of the principal church architects in North Carolina in the early 20th century, designing over 900 churches by the end of his 50-year career.³ These formative years under McMichael were significant to Marsh’s development as an architect as he was immersed in the architecture of religious, public, and residential buildings across the state. Like McMichael, Marsh went on to design theaters, Masonic lodges, and residences in various Classical styles, starting his own firm, “M. R. Marsh Architect & Engineer” in 1922.

During Charlotte’s development boom in the mid-20th century, the city was steadily growing into an industrial and financial powerhouse, resulting in an increase in construction of both commercial buildings and residences. Between 1922, when Marsh began working as an architect for his own firm, to his retirement in 1964, Marsh was well known for designing several important commercial buildings in Charlotte, most notably the Builders Building (1926, 312 West Trade

² In the 1921 Charlotte City Directory, Marsh was listed as a Mechanical Engineer at Chemical Construction Company. In 1926, he was listed as an architect and construction engineer.

Morehead Street, LL 1988, NR 1998) (Appendix 7)⁷, Eastover Elementary School (1935, 500 Cherokee Road, LL 2012) (Appendix 8)⁸, Plaza Theater (1941, Demolished) (Appendix 9)⁹, Fire Station Number Eight (1949, 1201 The Plaza; LL 2018) (Appendix 10)¹⁰, and Oasis Temple (1953, Demolished, LLD 1980) (Appendix 11)¹¹.

One of the pinnacles of Marsh's career was his design of the Builder's Building (312 West Trade Street) in downtown Charlotte. The purpose of the Builders Building was to showcase the modernity and technological advancement of Charlotte and the abilities of Charlotte's construction professionals during the development boom. Despite significant competition among the city's most highly regarded architects (including Louis Asbury Sr., James McMichael, Martin Boyer, C.C. Hook, William H. Peeps, and Willard G. Rogers), Marsh won the contract for the building. Although the philosophy was to exhibit the modernity and technological advancement of Charlotte, Marsh's design was steeped in the Classical, with traditional design elements throughout the building, namely a Classical, stepped masonry cornice, which would have appealed to the traditional-minded business elite. The building housed architects (including Marsh for a time), realtors, surveyors, general contractors, accountants, and other professionals in the construction field with the goal that it would "facilitate sharing of technical information and hiring of subcontractors, part of a nationwide movement for 'builders exchanges' that had begun around the turn of the century."¹²

Marsh utilized diverse styles for all his builds, from Art Deco to Tudor Revival. Although most of his designs were for commercial, public, and religious buildings, he also designed a few prominent residences in Charlotte, the Fritz Seifart House (1938; Tudor Revival; NR 2006) (Appendix 2) and Peter D. Burks House (1934; Tudor Revival; SL 1999) (Appendix 3), along with his Colonial Revival own home in Myers Park. In 1938, Marsh was described in the Charlotte Observer as a "prominent Charlotte architect, who has drawn plans for some of the main buildings in the Carolinas."¹³

¹³ Charlotte Observer, August 5, 1938

Although he was based in Charlotte and completed many projects there, Marsh's firm designed buildings across North Carolina, South Carolina, Virginia, and Florida, namely public and religious buildings. In 1925 and 1940, Marsh traveled to Cuba to oversee his designs for chemical plants in Central and South America. According to his obituary in The Charlotte News on September 5, 1977, "Marsh designed Morris Field, a U.S. Army airbase where Douglas Airport is today. He also designed Harry and Bryant Funeral Home, the Charlotte City Club, Fairview Homes, the educational building of Myers Park Baptist Church, Chantilly Elementary School on Briar Creek Rd. and several other schools in Charlotte."¹⁴

As both a licensed architect and licensed engineer, Marsh possessed a unique skillset that enabled him to utilize new technologies in his building designs. Although he has been remembered mostly for his architectural work, Marsh also served on the Executive Committee of the Charlotte Chapter of the American Association of Engineers. He won awards for his engineering prowess and accomplished a few "firsts" in the city of Charlotte, including plans for the first electric elevator in an apartment building.¹⁵ On March 17, 1931, in an address to the Charlotte Rotary Club, Marsh discussed trends in contemporary architecture, including the "application of modern methods and materials...and the trend of American business [bringing] elevators, plumbing, electrical apparatus, and acoustical materials into the modern architectural picture."¹⁶

In his obituary, Marsh was remembered by Tebee Hawkins, President of the North Carolina American Institute of Architects and Marsh's partner until his retirement in 1964, as "one of the pioneer architects in North Carolina...He came along at a time when there weren't many architects and designed many of the buildings we have."¹⁷ His legacy as both an architect and engineer lies in the preservation and designation of the various buildings he designed, including the Marion R. and Lavonne Marsh House.

Family Life

On August 14, 1917, at the age of 24, Marion married Catherine "Lavonne" Maxwell (1897-1948), aged 20, at her family home (Appendix 12). Lavonne was born and raised in Charlotte and was a graduate of Queens-Chicora College.¹⁸ Lavonne coined Marion's nickname, "Steve." When they first met, Lavonne was reading the book Stephen March. When Marion introduced himself, she misunderstood him and thought his last name was "March" so she started calling him "Steve" and the nickname stuck for the rest of his life.¹⁹ The Charlotte News reported that Marion and Lavonne's wedding was "a quiet home affair, marked by the utmost simplicity but witnessed by a number of friends and attended by keen social interest."²⁰ As the article alludes, the Marshes may have decided to move up their wedding date after Marion filled out his draft card in June of that year.²¹ Marion and Lavonne lived with Lavonne's parents for several years before buying a home at 27 Dartmouth Place in Myers Park (Appendix 13). In 1921, Marsh and Lavonne welcomed their first child, Elizabeth. Their second child, Mary, was born in 1923.

By 1929, the city directory lists the Marshes in their new home, designed by Marion, in Myers Park. This is corroborated by the completion of the house in 1929. The 1930 Federal Census lists the couple as living on "242 Hertford Road" with 9-year-old daughter, Elizabeth, and 7-year-old daughter Mary. Either "242" changed to "1642" as Myers Park expanded and perhaps updated its address system, or the census taker made an error. In 1931, the Charlotte Observer reported that the Marshes hosted an event for their church at "1642" Hertford Road. Marsh worked and lived in Charlotte his entire adult life except during World War II when he was stationed in New York and Washington D.C. with the War Production Board as their liaison architect for the construction division of the production board.²²

The Marshes hosted parties and social events in both of their Myers Park homes, on Dartmouth Place and on Hertford Road, and at the Charlotte Country Club. In his spare time, Marsh was an avid golfer and he and Lavonne were charter members of Christ Episcopal Church.²³ By 1940, the Marshes' eldest daughter, Elizabeth, was living in the home with her first husband David George, their son, Eric, and daughters, Gayle and Kathryn.²⁴ In April of 1947, Marsh designed a second-floor addition to the south-facing porch on the family home. One year later, at the age of 51, Lavonne died suddenly of a heart attack.²⁵ Marsh, his daughter Elizabeth, and her family continued living in the home after Lavonne's death. In 1956, Elizabeth and David divorced.²⁶

In 1963, Elizabeth married Palmer Quackenbush in an intimate ceremony at the family home. In 1968, four years after his retirement, Marsh deeded the house to Elizabeth and Palmer, who had been living in the home together since their wedding in 1963. Marsh continued to live at 1642 Hertford until he died peacefully at home in 1977. In 1979, the house was sold to Joyce and Charles "Bruce" McIntyre, who moved to Charlotte so Bruce could start his own foodservice sales and marketing agency, McIntyre Sales. In 2004, the McIntyres moved to a home on Sharon Road and sold the house to their daughter, Laura McIntyre Corsig, and her husband Kenneth, who are now the current owners of the home.

The Marion R. and Lavonne Marsh House is a fine example of Colonial Revival architecture designed by Charlotte architect Marion R. Marsh in 1929 to be his family home. The home is a contributing resource among several other high style Revival residences in the Myers Park Historic District. The home is locally significant to Mecklenburg County as the place where Charlotte architect Marion R. Marsh lived during the most prolific time of his architectural career.

Architectural Context

Comparable homes in Mecklenburg County can be found close by in the Myers Park National Register Historic District, Charlotte's premier streetcar suburb in the 1920s. The district is home to many of the more notable styles of the early 20th century and is known to house "several of the best Colonial Revivals."²⁷ Colonial Revival, now seen as a traditional and popular style across the United States, was not so prolific early on in the development of Myers Park. According to the National Register Nomination for the district, "only a handful of surviving pre-World War I houses are in the style...[however,] Colonial Revival became Myers Park's favorite style after 1919, and never fell from favor."²⁸ At the time of the National Register nomination, 128 homes were listed as "Colonial-style" resources built between 1920-1929, including all variants of the Colonial style. The Marion R. and Lavonne Marsh House, constructed in 1929, is representative of the Colonial Revival boom that hit Mecklenburg County and, specifically, the Myers Park Historic District in the post-war period. A few comparable homes to the Marion R. and Lavonne Marsh House in the Myers Park National Register Historic District include the James Buchanan Duke House (Duke Mansion) (1915) located at 400 Hermitage Road (Appendix 14), the Gilbert House (1928) located at 720 Bromley Road (Appendix 15), and the Sebrell House (1926) located at 2111 Coniston Place (Appendix 16).

The James Buchanan Duke House (Duke Mansion) is the most influential, high-style Colonial Revival home in Charlotte. Listed individually on the National Register in 1978 and as a Local Landmark in 1977, the home is an exceptional Colonial Revival style home in the Myers Park Historic District. The house has retained a high level of integrity and is now a bed and breakfast. The home differs greatly from the Marion R. and Lavonne Marsh House in both materials, massing, and form, but is included in this report due to its influence on the popularity of the Colonial Revival Style in the post-war period and was undoubtedly one of the major inspirations to Marsh, either directly or indirectly, when deciding on the style of his home.

The Gilbert House and the Sebrell House are both listed as contributing Colonial Revival style homes in the Myers Park National Register Historic District and are still extant and minimally altered. A surprisingly large number of Colonial Revival style homes in the district have been demolished or significantly altered, however these two remain as comparable homes to the Marion R. and Lavonne Marsh House in material, style, massing, and form. It could be argued that the Sebrell House is a Colonial Revival/Craftsman transitional style with architectural design features like a hipped-roofed dormer and hipped-roof front porch, all of which, including the main room, possess deep overhanging eaves with Craftsman-style brackets. All three are constructed of brick and contain a main block and side blocks, with a garage or carport structure on the right side of the façade. The Marsh House, slightly grander than the Gilbert House and the Sebrell House, has been affected by a substantial garage addition.

Architectural Description

Setting

The Marion R. and Lavonne Marsh House is located deep in the heart of the Myers Park National Register Historic District along Hertford Road, a curvilinear street lined by mature trees and other high-style homes of the period. The home is placed on an elongated corner lot facing east. Mature trees and decorative plantings on the lot highlight the natural beauty of the home's residential setting. A brick walkway leads from the neighborhood sidewalk to the entrance door of the home, with rounded brick steps contributing to the symmetry and archway details throughout the exterior.

Front (East) Elevation

The front (east) façade of the Marion R. and Lavonne Marsh House includes the main house, which is a highly symmetrical, five-bay wide and two-stories tall Colonial Revival main block constructed of running bond brick, and two additional blocks on either side of the main house: a screened in porch with second story addition (1947) to the south, and a garage with second story addition (2021) to the north (Photo 2).

The roof of the main block is an architectural shingle (faux slate) hipped roof with a handsome pedimented eave and modillioned cornice and copper flashing and gutters. A modest brick corbeled chimney rises between the wall of the southern block and the main house. The second chimney, located at the rear, is not visible from this elevation. The windows are highly symmetrical, six-over-six Colonial Revival style wood windows with a simple row of headers as the sills and, on the second floor only, the lintels. The entrance door is highlighted by an arched portico with copper roof and decorative engraved fan. Square pilasters frame both sides of the entrance door and a wooden screen door with six lights contributes to the symmetry. This decorative entrance door surround contributes to the Colonial Revival style of the home.

The southern block, originally comprised solely of the screened in porch on the first story, was expanded by Marsh in 1947 to include an enclosed, elongated second story room. The windows and modillioned cornice on the second story, as well as the pedimented pilasters supporting the porch, are an exact match to architectural details found on the main house. This block is differentiated from the main house by its weatherboard siding and shaker-style paneled window shutters.

The garage addition to the north, originally a one-story front-facing gable garage, was expanded by the current owners in 2021. The owners expanded this block by adding a second story to the garage but took care to retain the original front-facing gable and window of the existing garage. The addition was designed to be harmonious with the rest of the home, employing matching wood windows with shaker-style paneled shutters, a modillioned cornice, pedimented squared columns, identical weatherboard siding to the southern addition in both profile and size, and arches over both garages, which reflect architectural details throughout the rest of the home. An entrance door to the pass-through hallway, underneath the second level connector and between the main house and the garage, is visible on this location.

Side (North) Elevation

The side (north) elevation reveals the garage block with its white painted weatherboard siding, copper gutters, and modillioned cornice. This elevation has two symmetrical six-over-six wood windows on both the first and second stories. None of the windows on this elevation have shaker-style paneled wood shutters like the windows on the façade. On the first story, there is a side garage access door all the way to the west side of this elevation. To the rear (west) a wood terrace is visible from the rear of the first story of the garage (unattached to the home but resting on brick piers).

Rear (West) Elevation

The rear (west) elevation of the home, moving from north to south, is comprised of the two-story garage structure, a small wing connecting the block to the main house, and a rear covered porch terrace (unattached to the main house) with matching square columns resting on brick piers that match the main block of the house. On the first story of the main block, there is a bay window consisting of 28 lights and a copper roof, a smaller nine-light window, and a rear egress door. The rear corbeled brick chimney is revealed on this elevation as is the two-story screened-in porch block. On the second story, there is a row of wood windows in various shapes and sizes. Like the façade, this rear elevation continues the modillioned cornice. A concrete patio extends north from the exterior wall of the main block to the garage block. Towards the south, steps lead down to a brick patio extending across the main block to the screened-in porch.

Side (South) Elevation

The side (south) elevation reveals the first story screened-in porch with arched screen openings and square pedimented columns. The second story is comprised of two six-over-six windows with shaker-style wood paneled shutters. To the rear (west) of this elevation, the rear of the main block is visible with a pair of six-over-six windows on the first story and a single six-over-six window on the second story. Both chimneys are visible from this elevation.

Interior

The interior of the home possesses a high level of integrity. Maple and heart pine (in the 1947 addition) hardwood floors are found throughout the house. Crown molding and other decorative wall moldings are found throughout the house. The living room mantel is stylized with Classical details, with a cornucopia in the center and two urns topping either side of the columns. The surround is made of black marble. The home is still warmed with radiant heat.

The kitchen has been updated over the years and has a large island in the center of the room. The travertine tile of the kitchen is matched in the foyer between the kitchen and garage addition. An arched opening connects the kitchen to the rear egress door and main passageway. The stairs have a high level of integrity, possessing their original turned posts, rail, newel post, and wood runners. Decorative wainscotting lines the stairwell wall. A study to the south of the stairwell has a beautiful wooden beamed ceiling and stuccoed walls with arched bookshelf openings and a unique, Spanish-style hearth. A small bathroom, remodeled recently, finishes off the first floor of the main block.

On the second floor of the main block, hardwood floors are retained throughout as is wainscotting and crown molding. The second floor contains six bedrooms with attached bathrooms (one a Jack-and-Jill and all recently updated). The second-floor garage addition in 2021 is harmonious with the original features of the home. Continuing the theme, an arched hallway opens to a new primary bedroom and bathroom suite with a large closet and laundry room. The second-floor addition also allowed for a bathroom to be built off one of the bedrooms which previously did not have a bathroom (see plans for specs).

The current owners wish to designate the entire exterior and interior of the home along with the property's parcel, as deemed appropriate by the Historic Landmarks Commission, County of Mecklenburg tax department, and County Commissioners.
